

The Queens Head Inn, Box as it stands today

Sudden Death Of Mr Mitchell Of The Queen's Head Inn

Mr. Mitchell, of the Queen's Head Inn, Box, went to London a few days ago, to article one of his sons to an Attorney. Having concluded his business, he was about to set off for home on Monday evening, and took a coach in Coventry-street, ordering the coachman to drive to Hatchett's Hotel, Piccadilly. On arriving there, when the coachman opened the door of his carriage, he found his passenger a corpse! The body was taken up stairs, and medical assistance was sent for, but the vital spark was gone.

Salisbury and Winchester Journal, Monday 20 January 1812