Bradford on Avon

Bradford is a township, parish, market-town and Union, seated on the river Avon and Kennet and Avon Canal, 102 miles west of London by road, 104 by railway, 8 south-east of Bath, 5 south of Box, 3 north-east of Trowbridge, 5 south-west of Melksham, 12 west of Devizes, 12 north of Warminster, in the parish, Hundred, division and Union of Bradford, North Wilts, built within a cove, on the abrupt declivities of the sides of a rocky hill. The most ancient parts of the town are laid out in a succession of terraces, rising one above another to the very summit of the hill, from one of which, called Tory Rank, the views are very picturesque, and the prospect is extensive and delightfully varied. In the valley below stands the fine old parish church; near to its base, after emerging from between the hills, flows the river Avon, its banks dotted with numerous factories. On the west, and under the side of Jews'-harp hill, are the remains of an ancient monastery, now converted into a farm-house, and known as Barton Farm. The fine old monastic barn once attached to this religious institution is still entire, and forms one of the outbuildings of the present farm. On the east is the greater portion of the town, the larger establishments and public buildings standing prominently in view, while in the foreground may be seen Lady Down, the village of Hilperton, and the town of Trowbridge, with Westbury down and the Wiltshire hills in the distance.

Bradford means the "broad ford" over the river, and was a Roman settlement. The town was a place of some consequence even in the time of the West Saxons, being the site of a monastic institution, founded by St. Adhelm in 705; it was given to the nunnery at Shaftesbury in 1001. In 954, St. Dunstan was elected Bishop of Worcester, at a synod held at Bradford. It was of importance before, as well as after the Norman invasion, and this town was privileged to send members to Parliament, but this right was not exercised more than once.

It still bears the appellation of the Borough of Bradford, but whether it was ever incorporated and had a separate jurisdiction seems to be unknown. The local government of the town is in the county magistrates, who hold a petty sessions here the last Wednesday in every month. The Kennett and Avon canal passes Bradford, and communicates with Bath, Bristol, London, Devizes, Trowbridge, Reading and Hungerford. The river Avon, at Bradford is crossed by two bridges; one of these is of a very great age, which Leland speaks of as having "nine fair arches of stone." Standing on one of the piers is a square stone building, having a roof somewhat in the form of a pyramid; the supposition is, that it was erected for the purpose of levying contributions for the support of an hospital, which stood near the bridge, or that it was an almonry for bestowing aid on necessitous travellers. The other bridge, called Barton Bridge, with four arches, is lower down the stream; near the same, to the west, is the ancient ford by which the town was approached; it can now be crossed dry-shod when the springs are low and the water short. The houses are mostly gable-fronted, built with stone, and covered with the same material. The streets are generally narrow and irregular, but of late they have, in some instances, been widened and improved. In 1834 the town was lighted with gas, and on the 15th July, 1839, the Bradford Town Improvement Act received the royal assent.

Bradford is the central town, in the west of England, for the manufacture of superfine broad-cloths. This business is known to have been carried on here to some extent in the times of King Edward I. Edward III, invited cloth-workers to repair to England out of foreign parts, to whom he granted sundry privileges. Anthony Methuen, the ancestor of the present Lord Methuen, of Corsham House, Wilts., was the first to improve upon the old mode of clothmaking, by introducing, in 1740, into Bradford, certain operatives from Flanders, in order to manufacture superfine broad-cloth.

There are many respectable residences in and about Bradford; also some large and ancient mansions; one amongst the number was once the residence of the celebrated Duchess of Kingston, and is known as Kingston House. It has within the last few years been beautifully restored, in strict accordance with its original design, by the present proprietor, S. Moulton, Esq.

The living is a vicarage, to which is attached the rectory of Westwad, the tithes of the united benefices being commuted to £581 3s. 6d. per annum; in the diocese of Sarum, and the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Bristol; the Rev. William Henry Jones, M.A., F.S.A., is the present incumbent; the Rev. Henry Bassano Hare, M.A., is the curate. The church dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is an ancient and handsome structure, in the Norman and Early English styles of architecture; it consists of a nave, north aisle, chancel, and chapel, and has a square tower at the western extremity, with an embattled parapet, and surmounted by a low short spire of disproportionate dimensions. The tower contains a fine ring of 8 bells, and a set of chimes, performing the tunes of "Hanover" and the "Sicilian Mariner's Hymn" every three hours. In the churchyard, opposite the door on the south side of the chancel, is a very ancient tomb, highly decorated. The interior of the church contains many curious tombs; the most remarkable are in the chancel. On the south side, within a niche, is the mutilated recumbent figure of a Knight Templar; on the north side is a niche, containing the full-length effigy of a lady. There is a good organ, and over the altar is a painting, being a representation of the Lord's Supper. Some painted windows were presented many years ago by John Ferret, Esq., a native of this town. In 1840 a beautiful district church, called Christ church, was erected at Bearfield, within the precincts of the town; it is in the perpendicular style of architecture, having a tower and lofty spire at the western end of the building. The living, value £150, with a parsonage house, is a perpetual curacy, endowed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; it is in the patronage of the Vicar of Bradford; the Rev. William Popham, M.A., is the incumbent. Near the church, in a corresponding style of architecture, are very handsome and commodious school-rooms, which was built at the sole cost of the late Captain S. H. Palaret. There is a Free school near the Parish church, founded in 1712; a National school in Churchyard; an Infant school in Church Street; and a school on the British system in St. Margaret street, held in what was once a Quaker's meeting-house, built in 1718. In the Frome road are two almshouses - one for four poor men, founded by John Hall, Esq., the last of an ancient family who had been located in this town since then reign of Edward I.; his arms and crest are over the doorway - motto, "Deo et Pauperibus" (for God and the poor), date 1700; the other, for poor old women, is a very ancient charity, supported by lands in the neighbourhood that once belonged to the monastery of Shaftesbury. This charity is in the patronage of the lord of the manor, and was intended for ten person; at present four old women alone enjoy the benefits of this endowment.

There are the remains of many antiquated edifices, both of a private and also of an ecclesiastical character, in and about the town, such as the Priory, Chantry House, Tory Hermitage, the monastery at Barton, and others which, from lapse of time, their dilapidated condition, or partial incorporation with other buildings, cannot now be specified by name, their foundations, as well as their subsequent history, alike being lost.

Bradford is considered to be a very pleasing, exceedingly picturesque, and very healthy town, well defended from the north and east winds. Whilst its situation is such that all its impurities, after passing down its sloping streets, are immediately carried off by the waters of the Avon. A very handsome and commodious Town Hall and Market House have recently been built in the heart of the town. There are also attached to it, and forming part of the main design, justice-rooms and residences for the police. The structure is of Bath stone. The design, which is Early English in character and very pleasing in general effect, is by Thomas Fuller, Esq., architect, of Bath.

The Dissenting chapels are—Baptist, founded 1704; Baptist, Zion, founded 1823; Countess of Huntingdon's, Bearfield, founded 1798; Independent, founded 1740; Primitive Methodist, founded 1845; Unitarian; Wesleyan Methodist, founded 1818.

The parish of Bradford is extensive, and comprises the town, the tithings of Trowe, Leigh, and Woolley, the chapelries of Holt, Atworth, South Wraxall, Winsley, and Limpley Stoke, containing 11,272 acres; the population of Bradford in 1851 was 8,959, but there were 3,627 more in the outparishes connected with Bradford. Under the New Poor-law, Bradford is the centre of a Union containing eight parishes. The Union workhouse is at Avon Cliff, in the parish of Westwood. The Right Hon. Lord Broughton is lord of the manor. The market days are Saturdays, but for corn, cattle, and cheese, every alternate Tuesday. The fairs are—one in Bradford on Trinity Monday, for cattle, horses, and pedlery; one also at Bradford Leigh, on the first Monday after 24th August, except when Monday falls on the 24th, then on that day. The Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth railway (now in the course of construction) passes through Bradford in its course from Salisbury to Bathford, where it joins the Great western Railway. The present station for Bradford is Trowbridge.
