

A vicarage tea party

On Monday last the Rev W B Bradford gave his annual treat to the Sunday school children of his parish, to the number of upwards of a hundred. Most of the inhabitants of the village, rich and poor, were invited to partake of the hospitality of their respected and beloved vicar. The festivities of the day, which was beautiful, commenced by the juveniles of the party taking tea and plum cake on the lawn - the adults were not forgotten; they were regaled with an excellent repast. Various innocent amusements, with the merry dance, kept up the gaiety of the party till a late hour. A band of music was engaged for the occasion, and added much to the general harmony. Before the party broke up the Rev gentleman delivered a very affectionate address to the children, who retired to their respective homes highly delighted with the kindness and affability of their Rev pastor.
