Chippenham

CHIPPENHAM, with Hamlet of ALLINGTON. Chippenham is a railway station, parliamentary and municipal borough and market and Union town distant $93\frac{3}{4}$ miles west of London, 13 north-east of Bath, 33 north-west of Salisbury, 10 miles north-west from Devizes, $9\frac{1}{2}$ south of Malmesbury, $6\frac{1}{4}$ north of Melksham, $5\frac{1}{2}$ north-west of Calne, and 22 miles from Bristol, in the Hundred of Chippenham, and diocese of Bristol and Gloucester, North Wilts, situated on the River Avon, and connected by a short branch with the Wilts and Berks Canal. The living is a discharged vicarage, value £320, in the gift of Christ Church, Oxford; the Rev. Lewis Purbeck, M.A., is the incumbent; the Re. George Witherby, M.A., is the curate. The church of St. Mary is an ancient Gothic structure, with a spire containing 8 bells; it has it has been new pewed and otherwise repaired. A handsome new district church was erected in 1855 near the Railway station. There are four chapels - viz., Primitive Methodist, Wesleyan, Independent, and Baptist; one Free school, for the education of 12 boys, sons of freemen; also a British and one National school, for the education of the children of the poor. Chippenham is incorporated under the Municipal Corporations Act; the government is in a mayor, 4 aldermen, and 18 councilors; it was also a borough by charter, in the reign of Mary, returning two members to Parliament. The Parliamentary borough includes Langley Burrell and Hardenhuish. The houses are well built, and the principal street more than half a mile long. The market is on Fridays for corn, and second Friday in every month for cheese. The fairs are held on the 17th of May, 22nd of June, 29th of October, and 11th of December. Here is a Literary and Scientific Institution. The principal manufactures are broad-cloth and silk. The population of the parish in 1851, was 4,999. The town only contains 1,707 inhabitants. The parish contains 9,100 acres, which is divided into four manors. There are charities of £200 annual value. In the neighbourhood is Bowood, about 2 miles from Chippenham, the seat of the Marquis of Lansdowne; Corsham House, 4 miles from Chippenham, the seat of Lord Methuen.

ALLINGTON is a hamlet in the parish of Chippenham, distant 2 miles north-west of Chippenham, and $95\frac{3}{4}$ miles from London.

NETHERMORE, Stanley and Studley, are tithings. Tytherton Lucas is a chapelry. Derry Hill ecclesiastical district is partly in this parish. Sheldons, Rowden, Foghamshire, and Little Lodge, are farms.
