EXTRAORDINARY LONGEVITY

Died, at Redlynch, near Downton, on Monday, the 20th ult., James Forder, in his 100th year. This well-known character was for many years a pauper of the above parish, and although for the last thirty years laboring under a total deprivation of sight, he was enabled to the last, with the aid of a long walking stick, to find out and visit his old friends and acquaintances. He has left behind him an offspring, seventy-seven in number, extending to the third generation.
