

East Knoyle Man Found

Charles Ford, the old man whose sudden disappearance from East Knoyle we lately noticed, was found, in an exhausted state, lying against a barley-mow, on the premises of Mr. Parsons of South Cadbury, near Wincanton, where he had evidently lain throughout the whole of the previous inclement night. He was immediately conveyed to the New Inn and every method which skill and benevolence could suggest, was tried to rally him, but in vain; as he expired about eleven o'clock the same evening, without being able to tell his tale of woe, or indeed to speak a word, so completely was nature exhausted.
