

Old House to be Repaired

There is a likelihood that Mr. G. P. Fuller will put into repair the interesting old house of Great Chalfield, one of the most perfect specimens of domestic architecture of the fifteenth century in England. It is said that Mr. Harold Brakespear, F. S. A., of Corsham, has been consulted upon the matter as to the best way to retain every feature of interest, and that nothing be done to detract from its architectural history.
