Horace Frank Brown Dredge was originally buried in Vielle Chapelle Churchyard, Northern France as Private 7978 A. Dregger of the 1st Battalion Wiltshire Regiment. Sadly the village suffered almost complete destruction due to its close proximity to the front lines and the graves of 4 British soldiers buried in the churchyard were destroyed. After the war an order was given for the recovery and reburial of the 4 soldiers, sadly only the wooden crosses were recovered and no bodies found.

A Cross of Remembrance was erected to the 4 soldiers in the Pont-Du-Hem Military Cemetery, La Gorgue, Nord, France. The Reference for Horace is Vielle Chapelle Churchyard Memorial 5.

The Special Memorial has the following inscription:

To the memory of these 4 soldiers killed in action 1914-1915, and buried at the time in Vielle Chappelle Churchyard, which were destroyed by the enemy in April 1918.

"Their Glory Shall Not Be Blotted Out"

A stone cross names each soldier.
