

Boy Cautioned For Throwing Stones Near Station

Caution

Edward Young was charged with throwing stones near the South-Western Railway station. The Mayor said that one of the stones had struck him, and he had ordered the defendant to be brought up, in order to give him a caution. At present he would be discharged, but if he repeated the offence and was brought before the Bench he would be severely punished. He trusted this would prove a lesson to the other boys who were in the habit of playing near the station.
