

VINE INN, SALISBURY

ROBERT HOWEY begs leave to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public in general, that he has taken and entered on the above established and well-accustomed House, and fitted it up with every comfortable and genteel accommodation, and laid in a good stock of Wines, Spirits, and other Liquors.

He embraces this opportunity of returning his grateful acknowledgments to those who have already employed his Carriages and Horses, and as he intends to carry on the same, the public may depend upon having Carriages and good Horses, with careful drivers, on the shortest notice; he has likewise fitted up an elegant eighteen stall stable, fit for the reception of Noblemen and Gentlemen's horses, to stand at livery, on the most reasonable terms. He will likewise supply Noblemen, Gentlemen, and the public in general, with Hunters, and the best of Horses, from the breeders, on the shortest notice.

Letters (postpaid) will be duly attended to, by their humble servant,

ROBERT HOWEY

Salisbury & Winchester Journal, 9 November 1789