

Boy Rescued from Devon Cliff Fall

A 14-year-old Stratton St Margaret boy was today recovering at home after a dramatic holiday cliff rescue. Robert Stanley, of Bourton Avenue, was found by rescuers on a cliff ledge near Dartmouth, Devon. On Friday he was reported missing by his parents. They were all staying at a Brixham holiday camp. On Saturday evening coastguards received a report from a passing boat that a boy answering Robert's description was in trouble about 50ft up a 150ft cliff at Newfoundland Cove. Rescuers hacked their way through dense undergrowth to reach the cliff top above the boy. They reached him by abseiling down the cliff face and found him in a clump of bushes with only minor injuries.

Evening Advertiser 28th June 1976