

The Wrong Man

On Friday, before Mr. Dunston, Edward Daymen, a casual pauper was brought up in custody.

Superintendent Fox explained that defendant had been apprehended on a charge of breaking out of the casual ward in Tisbury Workhouse, but he now found that the Workhouse Master had made a mistake in the name and description of the man.

There was nothing against Daymen, and he was consequently discharged.

Western Gazette, 1 February 1901