

THE WILTSHIRES IN THE TRENCHES

Through the kindness of their friends we have from time to time been enabled to publish extracts from letters written by men of the Wilts. Regiment and others giving illuminating little descriptions of the life and conditions of trench warfare.

Wiltshires in the trenches

The other picture is of Sergt. F. Hancock, of the Wilts Regiment, in the dug-out.

Sergt. Hancock is a son of the late Colour-Sergt. James Hancock, of the Wilts Regt., a native of Trowbridge. Sergt. Hancock has several relatives still living in Trowbridge.

Sergt. F. Hancock (Wilts. Regt.)

He was on the Reserve when the war broke out, and we understand, had only a day or so more to serve before he would have entirely completed his army service. However although he was in Canada, he answered the call, paid his fare home, and is now helping to maintain the honour of Britain and the good name of the Wiltshire Regiment at the front.